

Stories of Redstone

Christ at work in our midst

LOGOS, a midweek ministry for children and youth, is based on Acts 2:42, which tells of the disciples gathering for fellowship, study, worship, and sharing a meal. Their mission is simple: intergenerational ministry so that the next generation will catch the faith and know that we are ALL children of God, and that we ALL deserve to be treated that way. To learn more about the ministry, Delmont Presbyterian Church welcomed two trainers from GenOn Ministry, the organization that sponsors the ministry and supports churches who want to implement it in their own unique settings. As part of the LOGOS Encounter, we experienced LOGOS. We shared a family meal, with a Pirates theme and table games. We enjoyed recreation that wasn't based on having winners and losers. We studied the Bible interactively, and we learned worship skills.

LOGOS is like jazz: there are a few very basic things that are crucial for success, and then each congregation adapts the program for their needs. Got just a few high school students and a few lower-elementary age children with nothing in-between? The trainers had ideas for ways to make it work. Want to use it as a Sunday School option? That can work. Lots of children and youth in your congregation? This ministry can strengthen relationships and bring even more growth.

Want to learn more about LOGOS? Contact Rev. Caroline Vickery at Delmont Presbyterian Church or check out their website at www.genonministries.org.

*Communicate the Word... Carry on the Work...
Change the World ... Together!*

Stories of Redstone

Christ at work in our midst

LOGOS, a midweek ministry for children and youth, is based on Acts 2:42, which tells of the disciples gathering for fellowship, study, worship, and sharing a meal. Their mission is simple: intergenerational ministry so that the next generation will catch the faith and know that we are ALL children of God, and that we ALL deserve to be treated that way. To learn more about the ministry, Delmont Presbyterian Church welcomed two trainers from GenOn Ministry, the organization that sponsors the ministry and supports churches who want to implement it in their own unique settings. As part of the LOGOS Encounter, we experienced LOGOS. We shared a family meal, with a Pirates theme and table games. We enjoyed recreation that wasn't based on having winners and losers. We studied the Bible interactively, and we learned worship skills.

LOGOS is like jazz: there are a few very basic things that are crucial for success, and then each congregation adapts the program for their needs. Got just a few high school students and a few lower-elementary age children with nothing in-between? The trainers had ideas for ways to make it work. Want to use it as a Sunday School option? That can work. Lots of children and youth in your congregation? This ministry can strengthen relationships and bring even more growth.

Want to learn more about LOGOS? Contact Rev. Caroline Vickery at Delmont Presbyterian Church or check out their website at www.genonministries.org.

*Communicate the Word... Carry on the Work...
Change the World ... Together!*