

Stories of Redstone

Christ at work in our midst

2018 General Assembly reflections

Redstone commissioners headed to St. Louis in June to discern the work and call of the church. Each served on committees that deliberated everything from relations between Israel and Palestine to family leave. The Assembly emphasized the kin-dom of God, the love we share as Christ's people. Here are the reflections of the commissioners. A full report will be given at the September presbytery meeting.

Elder Janie Short: To re-imagine the kingdom of God as the kin-dom of God suggests a horizontal structure of power in which everyone is a beloved child of God.

Rev. Wendy Keys: I saw God at work in all the ways the PC(USA) is advocating for justice in things like cash bail, black/white and LGBTQIA issues.

Young Adult Advisor Emily Hartz: The smile from a fellow young adult passing by on the plenary floor during a heated debate and the conversations about life outside of GA with the commissioners was God giving me humanity in the midst of all the business.

Elder Rich Smith: If we want to break the cycle of violence in the Middle East, the place to start is with the children. If they can grow up in an atmosphere of tolerance and acceptance that maybe it will spill over into the adult community.

Rev. Sue Washburn: The march to end cash bail for offences like speeding tickets was the church advocating for justice. Grateful to the police and EMTs who kept us safe on the hot streets.

Communicate the Word...Carry on the Work...Change the World
Together!

Stories of Redstone

Christ at work in our midst

2018 General Assembly reflections

Redstone commissioners headed to St. Louis in June to discern the work and call of the church. Each served on committees that deliberated everything from relations between Israel and Palestine to family leave. The Assembly emphasized the kin-dom of God, the love we share as Christ's people. Here are the reflections of the commissioners. A full report will be given at the September presbytery meeting.

Elder Janie Short: To re-imagine the kingdom of God as the kin-dom of God suggests a horizontal structure of power in which everyone is a beloved child of God.

Rev. Wendy Keys: I saw God at work in all the ways the PC(USA) is advocating for justice in things like cash bail, black/white and LGBTQIA issues.

Young Adult Advisor Emily Hartz: The smile from a fellow young adult passing by on the plenary floor during a heated debate and the conversations about life outside of GA with the commissioners was God giving me humanity in the midst of all the business.

Elder Rich Smith: If we want to break the cycle of violence in the Middle East, the place to start is with the children. If they can grow up in an atmosphere of tolerance and acceptance that maybe it will spill over into the adult community.

Rev. Sue Washburn: The march to end cash bail for offences like speeding tickets was the church advocating for justice. Grateful to the police and EMTs who kept us safe on the hot streets.

Communicate the Word...Carry on the Work...Change the World
Together!